Brought Music To Aid Work Of Artists

Bernard I. Green, an artist and chairman of the art department of Thomas Jefferson High School in Brooklyn, N.Y., died of a heart ailment in the Hospital for Joint Diseases at the age of 55. He resided at 344 West Seventy-second Street. Born in Swersen, Russia, Mr. Green was brought to the U.S. at the age of eight. He was graduated in 1906 from City College.

An artist of wide acclaim, Mr. Green had been head of the Thomas Jefferson art department since 1924. In 1929, he introduced the practice of playing classical music while the students were at work. According to tests, the music quickened their imaginations and improved their work.

Mr. Green, whose portraits and etchings have been exhibited, was a member of the Allied Artists of America, the Rockport (Mass.) Art Association and the Modern Etchers Group. He also had been an instructor of painting at the Holbein Art School and the Art Institute of Roerich Museum. He received the Halgarten School prize in painting in 1913, the Saltus medal and etching prize, given by the National Academy of Design in the same year, and, a year later, won another etching prize from the Art Students League.

Mr. Green was a member of Men's Club of Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, a trustee of Temple Bnai Israel, president of the National Creative League of Allied Arts and a Mason.

He is survived by his widow, Hermoine; a son, Dr. Marvin C. Green; a daughter, Mrs. Elaine Shainhouse; two sisters, Betty and Peggy Green, and three brothers, J. Barry Green, Dr. Arthur L. Green and Arnold S. Green.

Publisher Was Art And Book Collector

Carl Dreyfus, business leader and former publisher of Hearst newspapers in Boston, Mass., died in his hotel suite. He was 76 years old. Mr. Dreyfus was director and treasurer of the Dreyfus properties, Inc., which has large real estate holdings in downtown Boston. He became publisher of the Hearst papers in 1931 and resigned in 1937 because of pressure of other business.

Active in many civic and philanthropic enterprises, he was also a collector of rare books and works of art. He was educated at Boston Latin School and Harvard College.

After being graduated in 1896, he entered his father's wholesale clothing business and became a member of the firm. He was instrumental in developing the wholesale haberdashery and shirt manufacturing firm into the Bostonian Manufacturing Company, one of the largest companies of its kind in New England, says the New York Times. He served as president of the firm.

Mr. Dreyfus was a trustee of City Hospital for twenty-seven years; a director of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway; a trustee of the Home Savings Bank, and of Simmons College, and a director of Franklin Technical Institute, and of Associated Jewish Philanthropies. He also was a former director of Massachusetts Training Schools.

He leaves his third wife, the former Edna Wetzler; two sons, Carl Jr. and Edward G.; a daughter, Mrs. Emilie, Haas, of North Hollywood, Calif., and two sisters, Mrs. Carrie D. Solomon and Mrs. Estelle D. Amster, of New York.

Charges U.S. Zionist Machine Lobbies For Israel To Force Bond Sale

American citizens of the Jewish faith are being pressured to sell Israeli government bonds, Lessing J. Rosenwald, Philadelphia philanthropist and art collector, said in Chicago, Ill., at the American Council of Judaism's seventh annual conference.

"The whole face of American Jews and Judaism is being changed to implement an Israeli national policy," said Mr. Rosenwald, president of the Council and former chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Company, which was founded by his noted father, Julius Rosenwald.

"Through its control of American Jewish philanthropy, Zionism has built a tremendous machine to lobby for Israel," Mr. Rosenwald said. "We are witnessing today the spectacle of American Jews being mobilized as salesmen for Israeli bonds. American Jews are being importuned to sponsor this campaign to sell the bonds of a foreign state because, according to Mr. Henry Morgenthau, support of this bond issue is motivated by American patriotism.

"The only bonds I know of involving patriotism of an American citizen are the bonds of the government of the United States."

The Council, which since its inception seven years ago has been strongly opposed to the Zionist movement and holds to the principle that "nationality and religion are separate and distinct," was attended by 300 rabbis and laymen.

In his presidential address Mr. Rosenwald urged American Jews to adhere to the "basic principles of complete identification with American national life as citizens enjoying individual rights — the status which enabled their forebears to play a mighty spiritual structure in American life.

"Let it not be forgotten," he said, "in exuberance over the State of Israel that here, on the foundation built by our fathers in the American way, 6,000,000 Jews have enjoyed blessings unmatched by Jews anywhere or at any time in history."

Commenting on the forthcoming Israeli bond issue of $500,000,000 in the United States, Mr. Rosenwald denounced statements that the bond issue must be supported as "an obligation of American patriotism." He described as "effrontery" the recent statement attributed to Israeli Finance Minister Eliezer Kaplan to the Knesset (parliament), that the bond sale would be successful in America because there were five million Jews there "whose fate is linked with ours."

The bond issue will be floated in the United States on May 1 under the direction of the American Financial and Development Corporation for Israel. Prime Minister David Ben Gurion is expected to be the principal speaker in its behalf at a special rally in Madison Square Garden, in New York, on May 13.

Mr. Rosenwald asserted that the Zionist movement had gained control of philanthropic institutions, including the United Jewish Appeal and welfare funds, as well as other areas of Jewish activity, says the New York Times, through the failure of non-Zionist elements "to recognize Zionism as a movement to nationalize all Jews, including those of the United States."

"Through its control of American Jewish philanthropy," he said, "Zionism has built a tremendous machine to lobby for Israel. It organizes mail campaigns. It pays for advertisements in the metropolitan newspapers, boasting of the power of a 'Jewish vote'. It continues its political pressuring even now that the State of Israel exists."

The Council's president also denounced Zionist assertions that he said "single out American Jews as Israel's war allies." He called for "renewed efforts to win back from a foreign nationalism, control of our institutions." President Truman's message, addressed to Lessing J. Rosenwald, Council president, said:

"Please extend my cordial greetings to all those attending the seventh annual conference of the American Council for Judaism.

"The council deserves high credit for its program dedicated to the increasing national, civic, cultural and social integration of Americans of Jewish faith and for its belief that nationality and religion are separate and distinct. The principles for which the organization stands are deeply rooted in the American tradition, in a nation founded upon individual rights that include freedom of religion.

"I sincerely hope that the success which so far has crowned the efforts of the council will continue and grow with the years in the interest of your co-religionists and of Americans of all faiths as well."

Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., Ohio, in another message, commended the council "for its effort to maintain the basic principles of American tradition by founding its activities on individual rights, which include freedom of religion, and by encouraging the recognition of citizens of Jewish faith as individual Americans, entitled to these individual rights in the acceptance of their responsibilities as Americans first."

Rabbi Irving F. Reichert, of San Francisco, Cal., told the group that Judaism is in danger of being transformed from "a universal religion to a tribal cult." He assailed the "Zionist-nationalist movement" and said that it represented "a dagger pointed at the heart of spiritual Judaism."

He charged that Zionist leaders are seeking "to turn the ancient faith of the prophets into a tribal cult, substituting for the centrality of God, the centrality of the state of Israel." They are committed, he added, to "the incredible enterprise of changing the status of American Jewry from a religious community to a political nationality."

The American Council for Judaism unanimously condemned the "frequent utilization of Israeli officials by institutions or organizations of Americans of Jewish faith as a means of mobilizing American Jews into a bloc with political or economic responsibilities" to Israel.

As the Council ended its seventh annual conference, the delegates adopted resolutions that denounced the policies of the Zionist move[illegible] meeting had been devoted to round-table discussions and addresses concerned with Zionism, "Jewish nationalism" and fund-raising in America.

The delegates unanimously re-

D.P. Boy Adopted By New York Student Body

After four years of ghettos and concentration camps in Poland and Germany, and five more years of hopeful waiting, Arno Winogradzki, now twenty-one, has begun a new life as a student at Brooklyn College sponsored by the student body.

The student governing council began two years ago to raise funds for the education of a displaced student. When the $1,000 considered necessary for a start had been obtained from the student body, the council worked through the World Student Service Fund which has helped bring over 400 such students, and the International Refugee Organization and was finally successful in bringing Arno to the U.S., says the New York Herald Tribune.

Arno went from the Navy transport Gen. Harry Taylor, which brought 325 displaced persons from Bremerhaven, to the home of his uncle, Paul Wynick, at 456 Brooklyn Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., where he is to stay at least temporarily.

Freed from Dachau by American forces, Arno lived in Munich with his father after the war. His mother died in a German concentration camp. He was attending the University of Munich when word came through the W. S. S. F. that he had been selected as winner of the student-sponsored Brooklyn College scholarship.

"I was very happy to hear of it," he said, "but then there was a year of waiting; every day I thought I would go."

He explained that he knew English because of an interest in English and American writers — he had read Sinclair Lewis, Dreiser, and Dos Passos among others, he said. He expects to study languages.

The studious-looking youth, wearing a brown suit that he was not sure was "an American kind of suit," had only "short words" for his history. He was born in Danzig, an only son of Polish citizens. They fled to Poland from the Nazis; then they were in camps in Poland until the Russians came, and the Germans moved them to camps in Germany. His mother and most of his other relatives died there, he said.

Samuel R. Rosoff, sixty-eight, who combined the qualities of the fighter and the gambler and made a master builder of the combination, died in Baltimore, Maryland, at Johns Hopkins Hospital. Mr. Rosoff, president of Samuel R. Rosoff, Ltd., of New York, and of numerous subsidiaries, had specialized for many years in tunnel construction.

He dug about a quarter of New York's subways, many miles of New York's new Delaware Aqueduct and at the time of his death was engaged in the construction of a seven-mile water tunnel for Baltimore. His contracts ran into the hundreds of millions, but he had been broke more than once, including most of his early years in New York, when he sold papers for a living.

His home in New York was at 112 Central Park South. His wife, Mrs. Rose Price Rosoff; two sons, Stanley Rosoff and Nathaniel B. Rosoff; a brother, Jacob Rosoff, and a sister, Mrs. Jennie Goldman, survive.

Mr. Rosoff was born in Russia and, at the age of nine or ten, figured that the best thing for his widowed mother, his younger brothers and sisters and, quite likely for himself, would be to leave home. For two years he knocked about the world, stowing away on ships or getting a job as scullion in some freighter's galley, says the New York Herald Tribune.

It was in 1894 that he turned up in New York, selling papers on Park Row. There was a lot of competition, because newspaper offices were handy and throngs bound from or to Brooklyn surged along the thoroughfare twice a day, but the new arrival fought for a good spot and held it.

He became an expert dice shooter and succeeded in one game in amassing the sum of $10. With that capital, backed by the Rosoff fighting spirit, he was able to stock up as a train butcher on the West Shore Railroads. Augustus A. Low, an export and import merchant, saw the newsboy hunched up at the front of a car one day trying to spell out the headlines in one of his papers.

Mr. Low engaged the boy in conversation, was impressed with his self reliance and took him in hand. He invited the boy to his home and to his church, gave him advice on manners and clothes and tried sending him to school. Mr. Rosoff found he could lick every boy in the school, but study was too much for him and Mr. Low sent him instead to a lumber camp in the Adirondacks.

That probably was the making of Mr. Rosoff. Lumbering was a tough business, it just suited him and he learned a lot about engineering improvisations, as lumber crews in those days had difficult problems of felling, loading and transportation which had to be solved with makeshift equipment.

Mr. Rosoff returned to New York full of ambition and, in 1902, when he was twenty, landed a $150,000 contract razing a building on Herald Square. Mr. Rosoff was operating on a shoestring, but his lumber camp training counted and he made $7,000 on the job. After that he had a try at anything that came along, but nothing of great

MONTREAL MEETINGS

(Additional Montreal Meetings on Page Thirteen)

● CANADIAN JEWISH Congress and the United Zionist Council of Canada requested the Government of Canada to solicit guarantees of equitable treatment for the remainder of the Jews in Iraq and also urged that Canada support the State of Israel's claims for $1,600,000,000 reparations from Germany, headed by Samuel Bronfman, president of the Canadian Jewish Congress and honorary president of the Zionist Organization of Canada. Lester B. Pearson, Minister of External Affairs, promised careful scrutiny. The memorandum on the Iraq situation pointed out that recent immigrants to Israel from Iraq had reported disturbances in Bagdad and other cities, of attacks against Jews and arrest of Jews for Zionist activities. On the question of reparations, Mr. Bronfman said: "We believe that there is cogent reasoning and overwhelming justice in Israel's claim that having made itself responsible for the absorption and rehabilitation of the survivors of the catastrophe brought about by Nazi crime, this new State should be the rightful claimant of reparations from Germany and that an amount be allotted which would equal the expenditure incurred and anticipated in connection with the resettlement of the Jewish immigrants from the countries formerly under Nazi control." The deputation submitted that all arrangements with Germany should be made contingent upon an acceptance of a just claim of reparations such as presented by the State of Israel. Mr. Bronfman urged Mr. Pearson and the Canadian Government to use their influence to bring about speedy adoption of the International Covenant of Human Rights and asked consideration for the appointment of a joint House of Commons and Senate Committee to draft a Canadian Declaration of Human Rights restricted to the federal areas of jurisdiction. Taking cognizance of the stalemate in the United States on the Genocide Convention, the Congress submission states: "We are thinking of the great moral force which would be exerted if Canada would accede now that the Convention is actually in force." Recalling the active part Canada had taken at the United Nations last year in drafting a convention with respect to statelessness and the rights, privileges, and duties of refugees in signatory countries, Mr. Bronfman said: "Particular anxiety exists for refugees [illegible] which the shifting political situation does not make for stability", and urged the Canadian Government "to crown its earlier efforts by facilitating any early completion of action necessary to bring the Convention into force." The Congress delegation also called on the Canadian Government for support of the Geneva Convention for the Protection of Civilians in Time of War. Terming Canadian ratification of this convention as essential as a mark of moral leadership and as an example to other countries looking to Canada for guidance, Mr. Bronfman said, "We received assurance that the Canadian authorities were giving thoughtful consideration to the problem of ratifying this Convention and that a suitable opportunity would be sought to seek the approval of Parliament." Mr. Bronfman was accompanied by the following from the Congress: Joseph H. Fine, K.C.; J. Irving Oelbaum, of Toronto; Saul Hayes, national executive director; from the United Zionist Council; Edward E. Gelber, co-president of the Zionist Organization of Canada; Moishe Dickstein, Poale Zion; Rabbi S. M. Zamhrowsky, Mizrachi Organization of Canada; Rabbi Jesse Schwartz, national executive director of the Zionist Organization of Canada. Present also were Escott Reid, of the Department of External Affairs; and Leon D. Crestohl, K.C., M.P.

● Walter Gross is the newly-appointed assistant director of the Combined Jewish Appeal and the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, to take the place of William W. Solkin, who resigned to become director of the United Israel Appeal in Montreal. Donald B. Hurwitz is executive director of the Federation and CJA. Mr. Gross came to Canada in October, 1950, from Switzerland, where he worked in the Geneva headquarters of the International Refugee Organization. Born in Czechoslovakia in 1908, he received the degree of Doctor of Law from Charles University in Prague. Legal work occupied him until the Nazis invaded Czechoslovakia, at which time he escaped to England with his wife. When the Czech provisional government was set up in London in 1941, Mr. Gross was asked to join the foreign office. In 1943, he was appointed deputy chief of personnel and a year later became the personal secretary of Jan Masaryk. He returned to Czechoslovakia in 1945 and was afterwards appointed as Czech delegate to the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees whose work was later incorporated into the International Refugee Organization. He continued as deputy chief of the Prague office of those organizations until the Communist coup captured Czechoslovakia in 1948. Mr. Gross again left the country immediately and arrived in Geneva where he worked in the UN-IRO office before coming to Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Gross have one daughter, Judy Ruth, aged nine years; and reside at 5490 Lavoie Avenue.

N. Y. SCHOOLS HOLD ISRAELI EXHIBIT

A portrait of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of Israel, was presented to the New York Board of Education by Avraham Harman, counselor to the Israel Embassy, at the opening of an exhibit on "Israel: Rebirth of a People and its Arts." The portrait of Dr. Weizmann was painted by Samuel Miraky, of New York, during the President's visit to the United States. The exhibit also includes art and crafts objects and statuary. A joint project of the High School Division of the Board of Education and the Hebrew Culture Council of New York, the exhibit will visit the city's high schools.

Maximilian Moss, president of the Board of Education, hailed the exhibit as a means for developing the "art of friendship" and respect for other nations to promote world peace. "We must learn to understand the values of other peoples, their art forms, their customs, their mores, and how they grew up," he said. Mr. Harman pointed out that the exhibit featured many American classics in Hebrew translation. "This is only one indication of the extent to which we in Israel have found it possible to understand the American people and its traditions and of the need which our educators feel to make that tradition available to our own youth in our own language," he said.

Plan To Stimulate Art In Israel

Plans to exhibit American art collections in Israel and modern Israeli art in the United States, as part of a broad program to stimulate the development of painting and other graphic arts in Israel, were disclosed in New York at a press conference by Richard S. Zeisler, chairman of American Friends of Israel Museums.

Also participating in the conference at Mr. Zeisler's home, 14 East Sixtieth Street, were James N. Rosenberg, honorary chairman of the group; Professor Stephen S. Kayser, curator of the Jewish Museum of New York, and Edward A. Norman, president of the American Fund for Israel Institutions. The American Friends of Israel Museums is a subsidiary of the American Fund, which assists numerous cultural establishments in Israel.

Mr. Zeisler left for a three months' visit to Israel during which he will confer with the heads of its five leading art museums and with government officials on ways of stimulating Israeli art. It was explained at the press conference that while Israel has its own school of art in the various crafts such as metal working, its paintings and sculpture are similar to modern French and American.

In addition to arranging for reciprocal exhibitions, Mr. Zeisler and his committee hope to provide technical assistance in the selection of museum directors in Israel; to obtain for Israel a number of the world's great art works; and generally to create in the United States a better understanding of Israeli art.

Much of the art owned by European Jews and confiscated by the Nazis has been recovered by Allied sources, but for the most part this consists of silver and metal objects of religious interest.

Prof. Kayser explained that because of prohibitions in the Jewish religion against making "graven images" Jews did comparatively little in the way of painting and sculpture until recent years, reports the New York Herald Tribune. This fact, he said, as much as any other, has prevented the development of a specifically Jewish art in the sense that a school of French art exists.

A sizable collection of paintings owned by American collectors has been assembled for distribution to Israeli museums. These include a Picasso drawing donated by Mr. Zeisler; "Sailboat" by Marin; "Landscape" by Morris Kantor; "Mythological Figure" by Kurt Seligman; "New York" by W. Hong; "Carnival" by Abraham Rattner, and "The Dancer" by Jacques Lipchitz, all donated by Mrs. Alma Morgenthau; Monet's "Church at Vernon," Sisley's "Pont de Moret" and Renoir's "Portrait de Gabrielle" bequeathed by Alfred Schwabacher; Waldo Pierce's "Family Fishing" by Alex Lowenthal; "Biblical Figure" by Chasin, donated by Henry Pearlman, and a number of paintings owned by Mr. Rosenberg, two of which are his own work, "Triumph of the Atom" and "Winter Scene."

When Junior insists that he doesn't like a certain food, doesn't want it and, moreover, has no intention of eating it, don't try to force him. If it is a necessary part of his diet, try disguising it in combination with other foods or with different flavors or coloring. Some time, when he is particularly hungry, leave a portion of the rejected food at hand and he'll probably eat it. By not making an issue of the matter, you leave the way clear for a change of mind and appetite on his part.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

MOLDOWAN-GOTTLIEB

The marriage of Natalie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Gottlieb, 2229 Maplewood Avenue, to Lawrence A. Moldowan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Moldowan, 5154 Coolbrook Avenue, took place at the Sheraton Hall, Mount Royal Hotel, on Saturday, March 17, at seven o'clock. Rabbi Mendell Lewittes officiated, assisted by Cantor Nathan Mendelson. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Wearing a white satin princess gown, designed with a round neckline and sheer yoke, edged in lace; long sleeves, with similar edging, and long train, she had a crown of seed pearl beads, with a long cathedral veil of tulle illusion, adorned with clusters of beading which attached the train of the veil to the train of the gown. Her cascade bouquet was composed of gardenias and stephanotis. Mrs. Ben. Dalfen, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. HONORED IN N. Y. AT 70, RABBI FOUNDED YESHIVA IN GERMANY

A service honoring Rabbi Jacob Hoffman, former chief rabbi of the Jewish community of Frankfurt, Germany, was held on his seventieth birthday at Congregation Ohab Zedek, 118 West Ninety-fifth Street, New York. Honorary vice-president of the Mizrachi Organization of America and leader of Congregation Ohab Zedek since 1938, Rabbi Hoffman is also chairman of the committee on Israel affairs of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada.

Organizations sending greetings included the United Jewish Appeal, the American Joint Distribution Committee, the Jewish National Fund and the New York Board of Rabbis.

Born in Papa, Hungary, Rabbi Hoffman was ordained by the chief rabbis of Hungary and Galicia. He attended the University of Vienna where he received his Ph. D. degree for his thesis, "Halachic Elements in the Koran." Subsequently he served as chief rabbi of Radautz, Austria, and during World War I, he was field chaplain in the Austrian-Hungarian Army.

In 1922, Rabbi Hoffman was elected chief rabbi of the world famous Jewish community of Frankfurt, where he founded the Yeshiva of Frankfurt. In 1933, with the advent of Hitler, he served as a member of a seven-man council which represented Orthodox Jewry in Germany. In 1935, he was elected Rosh Beth Din (head of the religious court) in Tel Aviv but was persuaded by Frankfurt Jewry to remain in his post. When the Nazis imprisoned him in 1937, the Hungarian government intervened to secure his release. Dr. Hoffman was then accompanied from his prison cell to the German border by two Nazi Gestapo men.

N.Y. To Rename Street For Henrietta Szold

Manhattan Borough President Robert F. Wagner, Jr., informed Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization, that the New York City Council passed a bill changing the name of Dry Dock Street in the lower East side to Szold Place, in honor of the late Henrietta Szold, founder of Hadassah. Signed by Mayor Impellitteri, the bill authorizes the new name for the street which runs between 10th and 12th Streets and Avenues C and D. Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin, national president of Hadassah, said.

Thursday, March 22, the Jewish holiday of Purim, was set for the public renaming ceremony because it was also the 39th anniversary of Hadassah, which was founded by Miss Szold in New York, during the holiday of Purim in 1912. The ceremony took place at 11th and Dry Dock Streets and featured the replacement of the old street signs with new name plates for Szold Place. The speakers included Louis Lipsky, chairman of the American Zionist Council.

Henrietta Szold, a noted American Jewish scholar, teacher and social worker, during her lifetime organized Hadassah to begin a modest mother-and-child care program in Palestine, after a visit to the Holy Land in 1909 during which she was appalled by the disease there. Today Hadassah, with a national membership of 300,000, runs a comprehensive medical, health and social welfare program in Israel, which includes a network of eight hospitals, partnership in the country's only medical school, a system of country-wide school hygiene projects, vocational education, feeding, recreation and land reclamation work. It will shortly break ground for a new $5,500,000 medical center in Jerusalem.

Says Jews Need Unity To Solve Problems

The need for closer cooperation among the Jews of the world to help solve the problems of displaced persons and immigrants to Israel was stressed in New York by the Marchioness of Reading, member of the International Executive of the World Jewish Congress and president of the British section of the Congress.

The Zionist leader said that European Jews, decimated by the war, were in urgent need of help and that the Jews of America were best able to aid. Commenting on the situation in Britain, she said that the Jewish population had increased from 300,000 to 400,000 since the war but that the influx of displaced persons had created no problem.

Lady Reading expressed gratitude and admiration for the way the Jewish immigrants into England who fled the Hitler regime had found jobs. She said 10,000 unaccompanied children had grown up and many are happily married.

As the daughter of the late Sir Alfred Mond, who later became Lord Melchett, Lady Reading was baptised into the Church of England. In 1933 she embraced the Jewish faith. The rabbi who officiated at her conversion, Dr. Maurice Perlzweig, international representative for the World Jewish Congress at the United Nations, also welcomed her to New York.

Lady Reading said that she was making her first visit since 1939 and that she intended to visit a number of organizations devoted to child welfare, a field in which she has been active for many years.

Lady Reading was officially welcomed at a reception by Justice Justine Wise Polier, vice-president of the American Jewish Congress and chairman of its women's division, and 300 division members from the Metropolitan area. Her comments were made to the New York Times at the Stephen Wise Congress House, headquarters of the American Jewish Congress, at 15 East Eighty-fourth Street, which she helped to dedicate on April 15.

Prenatal care for the mother and better nutrition and medical care for mother and infant will help to prevent the loss of premature babies, and to lower the infant mortality rate in Canada.

He left Toronto to be concert master of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra; and was a guest soloist and conductor in most of the larger cities of Canada and the United States. Mr. Koldofsky lived for a time in Santa Barbara, Cal., where he was municipal director of music; and then moved to Los Angeles, where he formed the Koldofsky String Trio, which achieved considerable distinction. At the time of his death, he was concert master with the R. K. O. film studio orchestra. Mr. Koldofsky was known as the world's greatest exponent of modernist Schoenberg's compositions. One of the high points in his career came in 1943, when he startled the musical world by discovering and identifying several compositions by Phillip Emmanuel Bach, son of Johan Sebastian Bach, in a Toronto junk shop. He worked with Wanda Landowska, the famous harpsichordist, to bring this new discovery before the public in a series of radio broadcasts. Mr. Koldofsky was born in London, England, in 1906; and came to Canada in 1910, where he was educated at Ryerson School, in Toronto, and Pickering College. He received his musical education at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, where he achieved distinction at an early age as a teacher of the violin; and studied in Europe with the world-renowned Ysaye. Mr. Koldofsky conducted orchestras in Paris and London, and was at one time a member of the Cevcik String Quartet in Czechoslovakia. For a number of years, he was first violinist with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and appeared as guest artist with the Toronto Promenade Symphony Orchestra which he helped to organize. Mr. Koldofsky was a member of the Writers, Artists, Broadcasters and Musicians War Council during the last world war; and was an active member of its committee to establish a national library in Canada. Mrs. Koldofsky, the former Gwen Williams, formerly of Bowmanville, Ont., and Toronto, is a famous accompanist, teaching piano accompaniment at the University of Southern California.

"If a man die, may he live again?" (JOB 14.14)

The Yizkor hour is a goodly time to reflect upon some reasons for our belief in the survival of life. "If a man die" is a question that is old as death and as new as the newest grave. Of one thing we are certain in the uncertainty of life, that is the reality and majesty of death and there is no "if" about it. From the day of our birth we commence a pilgrimage to the grave. And death comes to all. It is the great leveller and makes members of all in the community of sorrow.

But is the grave the end of life? If this be the truth, then Shakespeare is right when he views life as "a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." However, this sacred memorial hour, as well as all other ceremonials honoring our dear departed, affirm our belief in life beyond life. How do we come to this belief in immortality?

To begin with, the idea of immortality is universal. There is hardly a people that is without such a faith. It is old as life itself. The savage in the heart of Africa affirms it even as Sir Oliver Lodge has done in our day. This belief in life after death is instinctive with the human race and instinct is a great compass factor in life. It is by instinct that the birds sense the first coming of winter and hence fly southward.

Added to the fact that the idea of immortality is universal, is the fact that the greatest minds of the human race have always posited it. One could spend some time listing names of philosophers, sages, and scientists who have propounded this great idea through the centuries from time immemorial. We need but mention Socrates, Plato, Maimonides, Henri Bergson, William James, Sir Oliver Lodge, and the great Dr. William Osler.

We were driven to the belief in life beyond life by the fact that here on earth life is woefully incomplete. Because of the many wrongs that are never righted here on earth, our conscience demands a cosmic justice, a realm where justice will be completed and where the good will receive their merited reward so often denied them in their earthly pilgrimage. Much of our labor when death summons us seems unfinished. Thus the poet in the midst of writing his poem is called away; the author in the midst of his creative work is summoned by death. No creative mind believes that his work is thus ended. The songs that are sung, the poems that are unwritten, these can find fulfillment in another realm.

Our love, too, asserts immortality. Love knows no death. When we stand by the graveside of a dear departed, the inner voice of love cries out: this is not finality. To the noblest love there is no death. To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die. Human affection can only speak of the eternity of life.

Our belief in immortality is derived from our experience of God. The Eternal, who rules this universe through loving kindness, surely cannot permit the extinction of life personality as though it were the blowing out of a mere candle. With the Psalmist we trustfully thus declare: "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I shall not fear evil for Thou art with me."

Man, possessed of mental capacities, moral convictions, and aesthetic yearning, is surely destined for some higher realm. The body which is the house of the spirit returns to the earth, but the spirit returns unto God who gave it. Therefore our belief in the survival of life is unreasonable though we have not as yet direct evidence. But the absence of evidence is no proof of the absence of immortality. For one thing, immortality has not been disproved! All that can be said thus far is that man, with his finite mind, has not yet succeeded in lifting the veil that separates us from our loved ones.

But, we well recall that the star Neptune always was swinging from its orbit but only a century ago man succeeded in discovering its ray of light. Atomic energy always existed but it was only yesterday that man was given the revelation of atomic power. Some day we shall yet be enabled to employ the techniques of modern science and with its help catch a ray of light from the realm of the great beyond. In the meantime we pray: "Teach us, O Father, to speak with all our hearts, the words hallowed by centuries of faith. Teach us to acknowledge Thy sovereignty and Thy wisdom with perfect trust that death is but the portal unto eternal life."

PASSOVER MESSAGE

BY SAMUEL BRONFMAN, OF MONTREAL, PRESIDENT OF THE CANADIAN JEWISH CONGRESS

It is not given to many generations to repeat in their own time the classics of the Bible. To ours alone, of the sixty generations that have passed since the beginning of the Diaspora, has it been granted to participate in an epic which in all its details evokes recollection both of the exodus from Egypt and of the entry into the Promised Land. It is a choice which carries, along with its signal distinction, most heavy responsibility.

That responsibility, moreover, is one which, despite the achievements of recent years, still lies upon us. The establishment of the State of Israel and the entry of over half a million Jews to their place of sanctuary was but an initial fulfilment of the age-old blueprint of liberation. To-day, as we write these lines, tens of thousands of Jews still languish in lands of bondage. Emigration from these areas of affliction — in North Africa, West Asia, East Europe — still surges forward. In many instances deadlines have been set to the permissions for exit: to-day they may leave, to-morrow Pharaoh may harden his heart once more.

But three weeks ago I had the honour to convene the National Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation where there was adopted a plan to bring to Israel, within the next three years, 600,000 Jewish refugees. It is a figure not without its challenging significance — it is the exact figure of the number of Jews who issued out of Egypt!

Canadian Jewry has played its honourable role in that glorious task of the ingathering which has made our age historic. That task it shall not leave unfinished. To complete the humanitarian labours of rescue and rehabilitation, and firmly to establish the State of Israel, not only as sanctuary and homeland, but as a stronghold of democracy bringing to the New East the benefits of the way of life we enjoy here in our own country — these are the immediate objectives of Canadian Jewish effort. It is with the fullest confidance in their ultimate realization that we look forward to a Passover of ever-increasing fulfilment.

interest or profit befell him until, in 1907, he got the salvage job on the steamship Batavia, wrecked in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence. He made $12,000 on that.

In 1911, when he was twenty-nine, Mr. Rosoff got wind of the approaching construction of the Cape Cod Canal, for which, as a preliminary, a breakwater would be necessary. Mr. Rosoff, whose construction equipment consisted mostly of a barge called the Ark, set out to get the contract.

His next project was a concrete recreation pier at Long Branch, N. J., with a line of coastwise steamers and he got just far enough into it to lose his $300,000 and his shirt when his backers walked out on him. He went into bankruptcy and went to work as a laborer, resolved to pay his creditors and make a new start.

He saved up $100 and, to the amusement of his fellow laborers, bought a stretch of rusted rails that once had been a backwoods railroad. Mr. Rosoff sold the rails, the ties and the spikes and made a small stake with which he went to Albany and bought horses and mules, which he sold profitably to contractors.

A power house in Albany was to be demolished. One of the requirements was that no dynamite was to be used. Other contractors, figuring that this would make an expensive job of it, put in high bids. Mr. Rosoff bid $1, got the contract and demolished the structure in one day with black powder. Sale of the materials netted him close to $30,000.

There were several profitable years in highway construction and then World War I sent materials sky high just when Mr. Rosoff needed them most and he went back to small-time jobs. A scavenging job in New York paid off handsomely, however, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

elected Lessing J. Rosenberg as Council president; Henry A. Loeb, of New York, was elected treasurer; and Morris Wolf, of Philadelphia, secretary.

In denouncing the appearance of Israeli officials in the United States to influence the political and economic responsibilities of American Jews toward Israel, the delegates declared:

"We reject the propaganda employed by such Israeli spokesmen and by some Americans that American Jews must accept such responsibilities because of a common destiny with the States of Israel. This is an unwarranted and unauthorized invasion of the integrity of the citizenship of Americans of Jewish faith."

In one strongly worded resolution, the delegates asserted that the "most insidious aspect of Jewish nationalism is its efforts to create in our youth a separation and a 'volition to go to Israel' and to view Israel as their 'homeland'."

Still further, the conference maintained that "the amount of Jewish nationalist history and doctrine in religious school text books is alarming." The resolution added:

"We call upon the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and all rabbinical and lay leaders to recognize these facts and to review the content of textbooks and to take the leadership in re-establishing religious school teaching in our synagogues worthy of the traditions of our faith.

"We particularly call upon the parents of children attending religious schools to recognize their responsibility to determine the orientation and teaching methods of the religious schools attended by their children. The concerned action of parents will quickly cure this evil."

Samuel G. Smilow, of Minneapolis, chairman of the resolutions committee, called attention to the forthcoming flotation of the Israeli bond issue of $500,000,000 and denounced the bond campaign's "predominant theme" that "Americans of Jewish faith have a unique responsibility to buy these bonds of a foreign government." He asserted that "there is no such unique obligation upon Americans of Jewish faith," according to the New York Times.

Miss Bella Meiksin, who is associated with the Jewish Labor Committee and formerly did work for the International Rescue Committee, pleaded for liberalized immigrant legislation to extend the admission of displaced persons for at least six months longer. Miss Meiksin, who for four years worked on D.P. resettlement and rehabilitation in Germany, asserted that "hundreds of thousands of displaced persons were still waiting for resettlement in the free countries of the world."
